BITTERMILK

Bittermilk is a line of handcrafted cocktail mixers made by bartenders. More than simply bitters, Bittermilk non-alcoholic cocktail mixers use a unique bittering agent (highlighted on each bottle), a natural sweetener and an acid to achieve a balanced cocktail.

Bittermilk’s premium cocktail mixers are inspired by classic cocktails and uniquely crafted with all natural ingredients at our custom manufacturing facility in Charleston, South Carolina to utilize complex flavor-creating processes with real raw ingredients.

The labor is in the bottle. Mix a cocktail or a pitcher’s worth of drinks using the simple ratio-based recipe on each bottle for a consistent cocktail each time. Just add booze. Or not. We intentionally crafted our mixers without the alcohol to allow the consumer to mix according to their preferences in spirit, strength and taste. One Bittermilk bottle makes a variety of different cocktails, mocktails and more.

TIPPLEMAN'S

NOT-SO SIMPLE SYRUPS

Tippleman's is a series of complex syrups made by Bittermilk Bottling Co., created to easily introduce more sophisticated flavor into cocktails, beverages and beyond. Our line of sweeteners are not simple syrups. Most cocktails and beverages are balanced by adding a sweetener, but simple syrup adds only a simple flavor. Each Tippleman's syrup is handcrafted with unique attention to the ingredients. Made in rather small batches, the finest quality ingredients are sourced and thoughtful techniques are applied to make a sweetener that is complex in flavor, yet simple to use.

Tippleman's Cocktail Syrups were created by bartenders for bartenders. A simple swap of a Tippleman's syrup for simple syrup can introduce complex notes without the need for modifiers or additional ingredients. While created for behind the bar, the syrups can be used for non-alcoholic applications, behind the bar and in the kitchen.

OUR STORY

MariElena Raya was practically born into the kitchen. Growing up, her father, Chef Robert Dickson, ran one of Charleston's most renowned restaurants, Robert's, where she started as a dishwasher and worked her way up. Joe met MariElena at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, NY, where they both studied. After finishing culinary school, the duo set off on their culinary adventure together, working in restaurants around the country before landing back in Charleston to manage Robert's of Charleston.

In 2010, Joe and MariElena decided to shake things up—literally—opening The Gin Joint, a cozy cocktail bar dedicated to serving pre-Prohibition-style drinks and next-level bar snacks. As customers kept asking for their complex cocktail recipes to make at home, they had a lightbulb moment: why not create high-quality mixers so people could make great drinks without all the fuss?

In 2013, Bittermilk was born, launching with three craft cocktail mixers that made it easy to whip up sophisticated drinks at home. It didn't take long for the brand to take off, earning national awards and shoutouts from The Wall Street Journal, Southern Living, and GQ for its attention to quality product made with unique, flavor-creating culinary techniques.

As Bittermilk manufacturing increased, the Rayas launched Tippleman's syrups in 2015—a line of complex syrups handcrafted for pros behind the bar (but just as fun for home mixologists). Then in 2017, they handed over the keys to The Gin Joint, selling it to their bar manager so they could focus on their expanding product lines, which led to the launch of Barcoop Bevy, a laid back, quality cocktail mixer brand made for everyone, from casual sippers to cocktail nerds. In 2022, Joe took cocktail-making one step further, diving into distilling spirits and introducing a line of ready-to-drink canned cocktails, Drinkmanship.

Today, the Rayas and their small but mighty team handcraft all Bittermilk Bottling Co. family of products, along with some private label projects, in their custom facility in Charleston, S.C. When they're not dreaming up new ways to make better drinks, you'll find Joe and MariElena on Johns Island with their four kids—Hudson, Juniper, Mitzi, and Rye.
